

April 6, 2006

I am writing to say that I disagree with Walmart's plan to open any financial institution or bank.

Walmart's horrible record should speak for itself. Walmart has hired illegal immigrants, refused to fill emergency contraception, refused to increase health care coverage and benefits for their employees, and has refused to lower the employee's health care premiums. Walmart has even gone as far as breaking the law for the sake of its bottom line. It is shameful that this country would even think of letting a company like this expand in any form.

Why don't we give corporations and companies that contribute positively to this country, and follow admirable work and ethical standards, the chance to expand.

What are we going to do, stand by and let Walmart run them all out of business? Where have our ethical, humane, and corporate beliefs and laws gone?

Jennifer Gardner